

Glen Erle Moorhouse, 55, Senior Official at CIA

Glen Erle Moorhouse, 55, a senior official of the Central Intelligence Agency, died Tuesday at Alexandria Hospital following an emergency operation.

Mr. Moorhouse, who had been with the CIA for 10 years, first did intelligence work during World War II, when he was a military intelligence officer with the Army in Africa and Italy. He was awarded the Bronze Star medal and the Croix de Guerre for his wartime service.

After a brief period with the State Department's Washington office, Mr. Moorhouse went to Paris as a special assistant to W. Averell Harriman of the Economic Co-operation Administration.

A native of Chicago, Mr. Moorhouse attended the Kemper Military School in Boonville, Mo., and received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Chicago in 1929.

During the 1930s he taught at the Kemper School as a professor of military science and was assistant principal of Washington Hall, a school he and a group of his friends started in Brussels, Belgium.

He was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma.

He leaves his wife, Lenore, of the home, 600 River Towers drive, Alexandria; a daughter, Mrs. Fred Lekson, 3609 Tipton lane, Alexandria; a son, James A., living in Paris; his mother, Mrs. James A. Moorhouse, and a sister, Drucelia, both of Whitehall, Mich., and four grandchildren.

A requiem mass will be offered at 9:15 a.m. tomorrow at St. Mary's Church in Alexandria, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.
